

Provost's Inaugural Lecture

Dario A.A. Vignali, PhD, professor and vice chair of immunology, School of Medicine, will deliver a Provost's Inaugural Lecture, "Cancer Immunology and Immunotherapy: From Mechanistic Understanding to Therapeutic Translation," at 4 p.m. on Tuesday, December 18, in Lecture Room 6, Scaife Hall. [\[View on University Calendar\]](#)

The Provost's Inaugural Lecture series invites University of Pittsburgh faculty members to give a lecture marking their recent appointments to endowed chairs. Dr. Vignali is the Frank Dixon Professor of Cancer Immunology in the Department of Immunology. His research focuses on understanding the inhibitory mechanisms, including inhibitory receptors and regulatory T cells, that limit anti-tumor immunity in cancer patients.

A reception with light refreshments will follow the talk.